

Zapata Sparrow Torreornis inexpectata

FEATHERY FACTS

This little bird is endemic to Cuba. It was discovered in 1927 in the Zapata Swamp. Since then, it was found in two other parts of Cuba. In each area, the sparrows look a little different. They also live in different kinds of habitats like grasslands, forests, and scrub.

