

Black-necked Stilt

Himantopus mexicanus

About this Bird

Black-necked Stilts are black and white with very long coral-pink legs. These tall graceful birds use their long thin black bills to feed on insects, worms, crustaceans, tadpoles and seeds in shallow water while wading or swimming. They breed throughout the Caribbean but there are more here in winter when some birds migrate from the US for the winter. Black-necked Stilts are noisy and excitable and have a loud wit, wit, wit, wit call which they give continuously when disturbed. Bird Size 36 cm, 14 in.
